There are mainly two varieties of Arecanut, white and red. We are mainly dealing in the white variety, which is prepared by harvesting fully ripened nuts and then sun drying them for around 40 to 50 days. After drying the nut, the shell of the nut is removed by hand/machine (process called garbling). The red variety is prepared by harvesting the tender (green) nuts, peeling the husk and then processing them as per the grade required (i.e., whole nut, two pieces, 8 pieces, etc), boiling them in water and then sun drying them. We can source the red variety too, should that be the requirement.
